Reuben was born in a part of Perry County which is now in Floyd County. He and his family lived in Bays, Breathitt Co., KY.

An article in THE EAST KENTUCKIAN contains this version of his death:

> One day late in the Civil War, Reuben was plowing in his field when several Union soldiers rode up and asked him if his name was Reuben Marshall. Replying in the affirmative, he was fatally shot by the soldiers who had mistaken him for his cousin by the same name. This cousin had deserted and possibly stolen a horse. A year or so later, Union soldiers again stopped at their farm. The man in charge asked if they had anything to eat. Catherine probably told them the story of her husband's wrongful death and also told him that they had very little because the soldier in charge told his men to leave this family alone. While they camped overnight nearby, they did no damage to the farm and left the next morning. Instead of taking from the family, they left a few provisions behind. This version was told by Reuben's grandson George.
